Parenthetical Citation for a direct quotation:

The depth of Challenger Deep is put into perspective with the knowledge that one would have “to stack 26 Empire State Buildings on top of one another to reach the surface of the ocean from the bottom” (Document B).

Parenthetical Citation for a paraphrased passage:

The deepest spot known on this planet is Challenger Deep in the Mariana Trench. Twenty-six Empire State Buildings stacked on top of each other would be needed to reach the surface of the Pacific from this great depth (Document B).

Citation for a passage within the context of the sentence:

Document B explains the depth of Challenger deep by stating that one would have “to stack 26 Empire State Buildings on top of one another to reach the surface of the ocean from the bottom.”
